Briotix Expands to a Larger Site

Growth in Ergonomics & Injury Prevention Service Offerings

Briotix Inc., a global leader in ergonomics and injury prevention, launched a larger, more interactive web site to match its growth in web enabled and onsite services. The site details offerings by industry or product, covering a variety of solutions to employers big and small; global and local.

“It was important to capture the breadth and sophistication of our injury prevention services and technology while not losing sight of the fact that many of our clients still look to us for engagements as small as an ergonomic evaluation for a single workstation. The new website successfully addresses this broad potential scope and application of Briotix services in a way that had been a challenge in the past.” says Bob Patterson, Executive Vice President and Co-Founder of Briotix Inc.

We are seeing a shift in workforce optimization services, especially technology enabled, with both the aging workforce and new, younger employees. We help the aging workforce minimize workplace injuries through onsite physical therapists, job coaching for better lifting, early symptom intervention and virtual training and assessments. The younger workforce enjoys the benefits of proper work environments, stretching programs, reminders to move and enjoy life.

“Even though young professionals such as myself are not seeing any symptoms, poor working habits can lead to chronic pain and injuries later on. Both progressive and traditional industries see the benefit and cost savings of implementing our onsite and virtual programs,” says Shelby Spencer, Head of Business Transformation & Technology Services.
