BRIOTIX HEALTH CTO Shelby Spencer joins a panel of experts for Zoho’s “Tech Talks” to discuss enabling a digital workplace with low-code platforms.

CENTENNIAL, CO – April 24, 2020

Briotix Health, the industry-leading provider of workforce performance optimization solutions, will participate in a virtual roundtable webinar series hosted by Zoho Creator to discuss how low-code platforms can help businesses in digital transformation.

Shelby Spencer, CTO of Briotix Health, will be featured on a panel of technology experts on Zoho Creator’s Tech Table Talks discussing “The Digital Workplace: Enabling a digital workplace with low-code platforms” on Tuesday, April 28, 2020. She will be discussing the impact COVID-19 has brought upon businesses and the need for organizations to accelerate their efforts to provide employees with a workplace that is physically distributed, but virtually closer than ever before.

Ms. Spencer joins the panel as an expert in building interactive technology applications on low-code platforms. As the architect of the Briotix Health systems, built on Zoho platforms, her work supports millions of virtual and technology-enabled employee injury prevention and health service interactions per year with Briotix Health clients. Her work has helped to position Briotix Health as a leading innovator applying next-generation technology to support the working athletes that Briotix Health serves.

In the webinar, panelists will discuss:

- The current socio-economic situation, and how it will accelerate digital transformation across the globe
- What a digital workplace will look like in the post-COVID-19 era
- What functions will adapt more quickly with technology
- How organizations should be using low-code platforms
- What are the challenges faced in this journey

The webinar is free and open to the public. To register, visit
